SOME TARIFF TALK

Republicans Seem to Be Divided on the Question.

NO GENERAL REVISION EXPECTED NOW

Conservatives Think the Matter Should Not Be Pushed.

CAUTION IS ADVISED

Politicians are still discussing the elec-

Politicians are still discussing the elections of last Tuesday, and democrats and republicans are studying the democratic defeat with a view of learning lessons to be serviceable in the future conduct of the parties. There is a division of opinion among republicans regarding the result of the elections on the tariff question.

When the last Congress adjourned there was a very prevalent feeling among republicans that the tariff would be a dang-rous question to touch, notwithstanding the dissatisfaction that existed with the new tariff law. The democrats felt that they wanted to have the country torrest all about tariff reform for a few years, and there was only a very small number of extremists who work of decreasing import duties. Mr. Reed's attitude toward the tariff was indorsed by many republicans, and his policy was generally accepted to be in favor of doing away with tariff tinkering for the present at least; to allow the country to settle down to business without the distubing element of uncertainty of the tariff.

Tariff Talk Revived.

But now that the fall elections are over a few politicians of the republican parts are inclined to revive tariff talk, these per-sons generally being favorable to the candisons generally being favorable to the candidacy of Mr. McKinley for the presidency. They feel that if a protective tariff is to be a leading issue in the national campaign their candidate cannot help being placed in a strong position by reason of his advocacy of a high protective tariff. It is this tendency toward bringing the tariff orward again that is giving a great body of conservative republicans much concern over the future of their party. They say there is no need of impressing on the American mind the fact that republicanism includes great friendliness toward a protective tariff, whereas if that issue is pressed forward with too much carnestness they fear a revolt of many newly made friends, whosher not extremists in their views of a protective tariff, system.

fear a revolt of many newly made friends, who are not extremists in their views of a protective tariff system.

Among republicans there is a feeling that the tariff law must be amended safficiently to cause the revenues to meet the expenditures, but this need not involve any general revision of the law as a whole. It is the law will be a supported to the law will be a s

What the Elections Show.

publicans generally do not claim that it was very largely a victory for a protective was very largely a victory for a protective tariff. It is more generally regarded as a revolt against the democratic party, involving local issues that for the time were given an importance over any national question. Tammany in New York, Mr. Gorman's personal fight in Maryland, silver like the personal fight in Maryland, silver like the campaign. These and other local measures are looked upon as having buried the old issue of the tariff for the time out of sight, and many republicans think that a serious danger lies before their party if these questions are not carefully studied, in order that their party shall not conclude that the landslide of Tuesday was an expression of the people in favor of a revival

Of course, there will be no important at tempt aimed at a revival of the McKinley law during the coming Congress, for the veto of the President would doubtless check any such effort. It is not the immediate passage of another McKinley law that conservative politicians fear, but simply that their party may make what they regard as a mistake by too prominently pushing the tariff to the front. They feel that they now have victory fet too. They feel that they now have victory fet too. They think that the battle has been won. Their party can indorse the principle of protection by merely repeating the sentiment that has for so many years been embodied in their platform. Even on the financial question they think the party should go slow and reassert its old tenets. They feel that the opposition to the democracy is sufficient to assure them success. They feel that they have simply to say. "We were prosperous when the republicans were in power; therefore the republicans were in power.

government."

Among republicans there is a universal feeling that they will be successful in 1896, Those of the party who are cautioning care are looking farther ahead than to secure one more republican President. They want a long continuance in office, and they think it can be secured by careful general-ship.

Electric Lights in Other Cities.

Electric Lights in Other Cities.

To the Editor of The Evening Star:
It seems that even Brooklyn, where jobbery in municipal affairs has had a stronghold, is improving. In granting a franchise for a new company to turnish additional light the company is to pay the city $500 per year for its franchise, and is not to charge over 30 cents per night for the lights. This is the next best thing to having the municipality own and run the plant.

In Reading, Mass., the municipality has jugi installed a most complete electric lighting plant at a cost of $32,000; and Independence, Ind., has erected its own plant, sufficient to furnish 2,500 lights at all times—cost not stated.

ence, 110., ence, 110., ence, 110., ence, 110., ence to the furnish 2,500 lights at all times—cost not stated.

But Chicago beats them all. She was the first city to piace her wires for electric lights under ground, and had so run the lights for years, when the superintendent of the company here told Congress it could not be done, though since admitting that it is much the better plan. Chicago has arranged for a piant to light the parks and boulevards, which, when completed, is to be the model plant of the country. It will have 1,000 horse-power boiler capacity, with one thousand 2,000-candle power are lamps, using about 100 miles of lead-covered cable.
